RE: Proudly announcing the archeologic discovery of the generation

Lone Palm Ferry Casino in coordination with the Tribal Elders of the Dhegihan-Siouan Nation are proud to announce the recent discovery that has turned the Omaha Archeologic and Historic Community into a turmoil with the discovery of several steamer trunks by those jolly lads from Omaha's Fallen Angel and Watcher Local Union #33 that contain an unknown collection of the Starving Artist Formally Known as Emil's doddles that initial findings indicate that these are from the earlier part of the 21st Century before the World fell Flat.

The archeologic artifacts were recovered by the famed dive team from the Fallen Angels and Watchers Union Local #33 while they were investigating a sunken storage complex that has been underwater, off the coast, since the Great Flood Disaster.

Local historic scholars and the experts from the Greater Omaha Restored Art Gallery speculate that these are part of the rumored lost collection of classic Emil doddles that were lost to the dustbin of time and the confusion of the time of the advancing waters of the Great Flood.

A spokesperson for the Fallen Angels and Watchers Union suggested that these had been placed in long-term storage at this sunken complex and, it would seem, had been merely forgotten in the chaos of that time.

The Lone Palm Ferry Casino's Historic Lodge is proud to announce this partial catalog of the discovered artifacts.

{Soon to be available at the Casino's Retail Emporium}
